SEASONABLE FOOD SUPPLIES ON MARKET BENCHES.

Notwithstanding the wet weather, the Maryland and Virginia farmers were on hand this morning at the market stalls with a fresh supply of vegetables. Sugar corn was more plentiful and of better quality this morning than it has been this season. The market was flooded with tomatoes, which were cheaper than ever. Good lettuce is scarce now, and sold at 8c to 10c a head. Other vegetables re-

Maryland and Virginia peaches were not very plentiful in the fruit market today. The farmers promise a better lot soon, larger and of better flavor. The blackberry supply is holding out better than was expected and the berries have increased little in prices, still selling at 10c to 15c a quart. A fine lot of watermelons was on sale at 30c to 40c per melon.

Veal was slightly better this morning than earlier in the week. Veal cutlets, however, still bring 25c a pound and veal 15c. The supply of lamb was larger today, in fact there was a good supply of all the meats on the benches.

Although the fishermen are catching Potomac bass up the river, little or none has yet appeared in the Washington market. The trout supply was the best on the market today, and sold at 121/2@15c a pound. Bluefish were scarce and nearly all large.

Soft shell crabs are now sold at 75c@$1.00 per dozen, and are exceedingly scarce. A good supply of hard crabs was on hand today.
